RUHR OCCUPATION.

London, Feb. 10. The extension of the occupation of Germany is described by Renter's Essen's correspondent as accompanied by a sort of creeping paralysis, the staffs ceasing work when stations are occupied. That West Ruhr is still closed to passenger traffic. East Ruhr is sending a reduced service of slow trains eastwards, two going to Berlin daily instead of eight. The production of the mines is most low, being confined to the supply of local iron and steel industries. The threat of the French to place an embargo on these deliveries will merely mean increasing the amount of coal dumped at the pitheads, which is already embarrassing the French. In one case at Recklinghausen the coal was thrown into a marsh.

While criticism of the Government's failure to secure reparations from the Ruhr is increasing it is mostly wonfined to the Extreme Left. There are no signs of general impatience, even in face of the paralysis of communications by rail and water owing to strikes and subotage in the Runr and the closing of the Lorraine iten works through lick of facil fermerly received from the Ruhr. The public recalls M. Polncare's insistence at the quitset that the task would be most protracted. It is evident, however, that in face of the German obstruction the Freigh are tiring of consillatory methods and have decided to adopt the harsher measures, which the Belgians at first advocated. Conferences between French and Belgian Ministers yesterday and to-day discussed the establishment of a more rigorous organisation in the Ruhr with a view to diverting products to France and Belgium.-Reater.

London, Feb. 10. The British Government has referred to the military authorities of Cologne the French Government's request for facilities for that the nature of weach he confised to passage of cal trade to France through the British zone, 'In the F event of a general strike on the German callways it is understood that France has suggested the temps/rary transfer of a small portion of the British once to French control.—Renter.

Leafield, Feb. S.

The Daily Telegraph says: "In British circles the question raised by the French G vernment as to the transport of reparations coal by trains across the British zone to France is regarded for the time being as of a more or less acadenic character, since trains are by normeans numerous. On this account, and considering the recent assurance given to the British Government by Rremier Poincare that the French authorities" sould be careful not to cause the British authorities at Cologne any emparrassment, there seems no reason why coal trains from the Ruhr should not utilise the two fallway tracks which skirt the territory under British jurisdiction."

The Dully News also thinks that, "In view of the fact that France undertook to avoid the implication of the British authorities as far as possible, it would be surprising if sanction for the passage of coal through the British area were suspended."-Wireless to the Dally
